Throughout her life, Susie Russell has been drawn to the serenity of nature. She has noted how deeply impacted we are by the simple experience of spending time outdoors, believing that we are invigorated and renewed as the beauty of the natural world feeds the soul, imprinting us with wonder and gratitude.

For the beauty of the earth, for its quiet joy and restorative power, for the love of the land:

"This is why I paint."

ONE OF A KIND

HESS LIBRARY GALLERY

Initially, leaving the dark room for digital computer printed photography in 2011 was an extremely difficult transition for Todd Hoover, after making photos in his darkroom for so many years. By 2016 Hoover returned darkroom processing to his artistic practice.

His current work includes vintage doll heads used in a series he calls "cute little faces."

His search for new subjects to explore and his love of the photography process result in an ever expanding body of work.

WILLIAM BECKER

"Nothing I create is rote. There are no duplicates. There are no production pieces. Each work of art is one-of-a kind, individual and stand-alone from my other works of art."

"Figuratively and literally, ceramics is honestly a very hands-on and often soulful creative experience. Of all the various media I create in it is the most enjoyable to me as an artist. The possibilities are many if not endless. "

DANIEL STORMONT

STORMONT ART STUDIO

SHOWPLACE GALLERY

A life-long resident of Berrien County, Daniel Stormont has only been painting and exhibiting for the past 10 years, working in acrylics with different styles and subjects.

Not wanting to be known as "The Tree Guy" Daniel Stormont branched into other subject matter for his art, often being inspired by music, conversations, pop culture, and random thoughts.
